U.S. leaders, friends pay tribute to HHH

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The nation's leaders joined farmers and factory workers Monday in a final tribute to Hubert Horatio Humphrey. "He loved everybody," recalled Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Mondale, a fellow Minnesotan and Humphrey protege, said the late senator "never found a person who wasn't worthy of his time, concern and love."

President Carter also paid tribute to Humphrey at the funeral service in House of Good Hope Presbyterian Church. Carter recalled the recent weekend he and Humphrey spent at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Although he served four years as vice president, Humphrey never had been to Camp David, and he thanked Carter effusively for the invitation.

"It was the greatest favor I ever did for myself," said Carter. "We spent two days on top of a mountain, in front of a fireplace, just talking and listening."

Describing that conversation, Carter said Humphrey never expressed bitterness toward those who had disappointed him in his many political campaigns.

The 3,000-seat church was filled with government leaders, members of Congress, judges and diplomats, the men of power who had come to love and respect Humphrey during his 30 years in Washington.

After the service, Humphrey's body was taken to Lakewood Cemetery in Minneapolis for burial. Hundreds of people lined the street leading to the gate of the cemetery and more than 1,000 people watched from a hillside on cemetery grounds. After a short prayer and trumpeted taps, the casket was lowered into the ground.

Humphrey's death Friday night after a long battle against cancer prompted an outpouring of sympathy from America's most powerful and influential citizens. The honors that followed were comparable to the state funerals for presidents.

But the tributes that seemed most appropriate for Humphrey, a tireless crusader for civil rights and jobs legislation, were the long lines of anonymous mourners, the people to whom he had dedicated his political life.

People waited for hours in below-zero weather, outside the Minnesota Capitol where his body lay in state, for an opportunity to walk past his casket. The capitol remained open through the night, and the governor's office estimated that 43,000 filed through the marble rotunda.

Court rejects ban on R-rated movie

By SYBEL ALGER
Universe Staff Writer

Fourth District Court Judge George E. Ballif ruled Monday that the movie "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" is a serious work in the field of art and literature.

He denied a request by Provo that he issue a preliminary injunction against the film. City Attorney Glenn Ellis said at 5 p.m. Monday he "hadn't had a chance to digest the decision," and he didn't know whether the city would appeal the ruling.

Unita Theater manager Robert Bathey was not surprised by the decision. "I never had any doubt after being in court. Provo City made a big deal over the movie. If they hadn't made such a big deal, the movie would have probably left town."

He said the film is scheduled to run until Jan. 25 and "between 6,000 and 7,000 people had seen the movie."

In denying the injunction, Ballif said, "although ultimate sexual acts were portrayed they were not explicit. Hard core representations of ultimate sexual acts are absent."

The judge's decision referred to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Miller v. California that "No one will be subject to prosecution for exposure of obscene materials unless these materials depict ... patently offensive 'hard core' sexual conduct."

The decision also cited Jenkins v. Georgia, in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the movie "Carnal Knowledge" was not obscene under the Miller standards because even though there were "ultimate sexual acts" understood to be taking place, the camera does not focus on the bodies of the actors at such times. There is no exhibition whatever of the actors' genitals, lewd or otherwise during these scenes. There are occasional scenes of nudity, but nudity alone is not enough to make material legally obscene under the Miller standards."

Judge Ballif ruled "... the evidence before the Court of the literary and movie experts who saw both 'Carnal Knowledge' and 'Looking for Mr. Goodbar' is that the handling of sexual matter in 'Mr. Goodbar' was less offensive than in 'Carnal Knowledge.'"

He then ruled "... the evidence presented by movie critics and literary experts conclusively established (for the purpose of this proceeding) that the film is a serious work in the field of art and literature, and for that reason alone is entitled to the protection of the First Amendment."

A copy of the film was confiscated Dec. 27, but the Unita Theater continued showing the movie. Provo asked for a preliminary injunction against the film, naming as defendants Theater Manager Robert J. Bathey, Plitt Theater District Manager Ernest R. Hoffman, Plitt Theaters and Paramount Pictures.

A show cause hearing was held Jan. 6, but Provo had incorrectly served summonses on some of the defendants. The hearing continued last Thursday when Provo Police officer Don Barber described the film to the court. A member of the tactical squad, he reviewed the film and reported to his superior that he thought the film was obscene. He also participated in the confiscation of the movie.

In the final session this past Friday, several witnesses testified that the film had "serious artistic value."

Provo signs hotel pact

Only one member of the Provo City Commission signed the recent agreement between Provo City and a group of West Coast developers of the Provo Plaza Hotel.

The agreement was signed Thursday by Commissioner J. Earl Wignall, who signed as the chairman of the Provo City Redevelopment Agency.

The agency is made up of the City Commission members who "abandon their roles as the City Commission and form the redevelopment agency," Mayor James E. Ferguson said.

Daniel Fritz, who will serve as president of Provo Plaza Hotel Inc., presented the city with a goodwill check of $25,000 to insure the investors' performance. Fritz said the agreement will enable his group to "talk with a high degree of authority to potential creditors."

Ferguson said most of the agreement was decided by the former City Commission, which had authorized Wignall to sign the agreement.

"Most of the work was done before Anagene (Meecham) and I were in office," Ferguson said, "and we didn't have much to say about it."

The agreement gives the developers 180 days to meet certain conditions, such as financing. Ferguson said. If those conditions are met, the city agrees to sell the developers the land for the hotel and provide the necessary parking.

"Many people in the Provo business district have had questions since the agreement was signed," Ferguson said. "But questions are supposed to be asked beforehand, not afterwards."

Ferguson said now that the agreement is at its present stage, "it can affect what's going on." This would include the controls on the project, he added.

Tipsters win free dinners

Winners of the first news tip award of the winter semester are Paul Manwaring and Phil Crosby.

Their tip was the first of several calls about an airplane that ran out of gas and made an emergency landing on I-15. Their call resulted in photographs and a story in the Monday Magazine.

Manwaring, a junior from Salt Lake City, and Crosby, a senior in political science from Monterey, Calif., were driving north on I-15 when they spotted the plane. "We rushed to the nearest phone booth to call in the news tip," Crosby said.

They will receive a dinner for two at a Provo-Orem area restaurant courtesy of the University.

News tip runners-up were calls about the mouth-to-mouth resuscitation of a laboratory pig and a pile of smoldering coal.

Fences erected to protect coeds

By PAUL MARTIN
Universe Staff Writer

Fences are going up on the BYU campus to pull off fences down.

Robert W. Kelshaw, chief of BYU Security/Police, said more than three years of research preceded installation of the new security fences.

The security fences have been put up along the path on the hill between the upper campus and Helaman Halls, the sidewalk leading to the steps behind the Maeser Building, and the path by the outdoor tennis courts.

Kelshaw said the fences serve two purposes. First, they will make it more difficult for a would-be assailant to hide in the underbrush alongside those paths. Second, the fences will leave attackers without a retreat into the bushes where assailants have forced victims off the pathways in the past.

The fences are only the beginning of a new security system. Kelshaw has recorded the location of every reported sexual assault, robbery, exhibitionist, window peeper, prowler and suspicious person during a three-year period of research. He said certain trends and high crime areas became evident through the research.

Gary Gilmore execution recalled one year later

By SCOTT LLOYD
Universe Staff Writer

Just at dawn on Jan. 17, 1977, a Utah firing squad shot Gary Mark Gilmore, culminating a bizarre chain of events and ending a 10-year lull in American executions.

A year has passed. Vern Damico, Gilmore's uncle, was allowed to witness the execution at the invitation of the 31-year-old confessed killer. Damico recalled Thursday that the last words spoken to him by Gilmore were, "See you later, Vern."

In addition to being the first execution since 1967, the event drew national attention after Gilmore told the State Supreme Court he wanted to die.

Religious beliefs

"He knew that he killed two good men," Damico recalled. "He especially knew it after it was all over and he had had time to think about it."

The death wish resulted from Gilmore's religious beliefs, Damico explained. "He said, 'Vern, I believe there's somebody upstairs and I want to go up there so I can be a better person than I am now.'"

Dying a better alternative

Damico described his nephew as an intelligent man, knowledgeable in the Catholic religion and Buddhism. He said Gilmore believed the only way to pay for his deeds was to die.

Ron Stanger, one of two Provo attorneys who defended Gilmore's right to die, said the convicted man believed in reincarnation. He believed his miserable life was a form of karma and he would attain a better existence by dying.

But both Stanger and colleague Robert Moody denied that death was Gilmore's preference. "He just thought that was a better alternative than staying in prison," Moody said. Stanger said Gilmore would have escaped had he been able.

Contempt for legal action

In either case, Gilmore had strong and sometimes foul words of contempt for those who tried to block his execution through legal action. They included the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

His invalid mother, Bessie, obtained a temporary delay from the U.S. Supreme Court. She still lives in Milwaukee, Ore., and is an active member of the LDS Church, Stanger said. He added that Gilmore's great-grandfather on his mother's side was one of Provo's early Mormon colonizers.

BYU students slain

The nightmare began on the night of July 20, 1976, when Gilmore shot Bennie Bushnell, a 24-year-old motel clerk. The next night, Gilmore slew Max Jensen, 24, an Orem service station.

Both victims were BYU students who left widows with children.

Debra Bushnell

Debra Bushnell now lives in Pasadena, Calif., where she devotes her time to raising her two children. She gave birth to a daughter within weeks of the execution. She keeps contact with Bishop Dean Christensen of the LDS Provo 5th Ward, where she still sends tithing and maintains church records.

Italy premier resigns post

ROME (AP) — Italy's 39th government since the overthrow of Fascism in World War II fell Monday. Premier Giulio Andreotti resigned in the midst of economic turmoil, political violence and a Communist drive for power in this NATO country.

President Giovanni Leone scheduled talks with political leaders Tuesday and is expected to ask Andreotti, 59, the three-time Christian Democrat premier, to try to form a new government by Thursday. But long and difficult negotiations appeared certain.

The United States has strongly opposed entry of the Communists in the government, where they would share military information on the Atlantic Alliance.

If a cabinet cannot be formed, elections for a new parliament would have to be held, but all parties oppose it. Opinion polls indicate elections would further polarize the country, increasing support for the Christian Democrats and Communists at the expense of the smaller parties.

In the past three years, 27 persons — including four this year — have died in political clashes. Most of the victims were youthful members of extremist groups, including the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement on the right and urban guerrilla groups such as the Red Brigades and Armed Proletariat on the left.

Andreotti, who led a one-party minority government for 17 months, resigned after it became clear that the largest Communist party in Western Europe, supported by Socialists and Republicans, would no longer allow his government to continue.

To avoid the prospect of new elections that could aggravate the political crisis, the Christian Democrat Party, which has ruled Italy alone or in coalition since 1945, must find a solution acceptable to the left — cabinet posts for Communist-approved independents, a coalition including the Socialists, policy concessions that would meet concerns of the working class, or some other formula not yet aired publicly.

Commission OK's street cleaner; opens bids for new automobile

The purchase of a new street cleaning machine was approved and bids for an automobile were opened at the Provo City Commission meeting Monday morning.

The new machine, called a "Vac-All," will supplement the street cleaner Provo already owns and will cost $83,550.

"This new cleaner is the only one I've seen that can reach into some of our deep gutters," said Max Ford, head of the Provo City Street Department.

Ford said the new sweeper will have the capability "reaching" into the gutters and sweeping the debris into a vacuum. The vacuum then pulls the debris into a collecting bin in the truck.

"One good feature of the Vac-All is that the brush underneath automatically lifts up when it meets an obstruction such as a driveway," Ford said. "The old cleaner isn't able to do this and the brushes get worn unevenly."

The street department considered another sweeper which cost $10,000 less than the Vac-All, but, Ford said, it did not meet specifications. He said the other sweeper was too small and could not fill the needs of the city.

The agenda also included the opening of bids from local automobile dealers. Community Development is considering buying a vehicle to transport inspection teams. The vehicle would also be used for visiting dignitaries.

False alarm forces evacuation of Wilkinson Center, bookstore

Students got a taste of the outdoors around the Wilkinson Center Monday as they fled out of the building in response to a fire alarm.

The false alarm that sounded about 11 a.m. required the evacuation of everyone in the building, including the bookstore, according to Leo Bastian, ELWC building services manager.

Bastian said an "enunciator," located at the Candy Jar, told officials where to look for the "fire."

"A grill in the Cougar eat overheated and tripped the sensors," Bastian said.

"We called the electrical shop in the Physical Plant Building, and they came over and shut the alarm off within five minutes."

Apparently, many of those in the building were not very concerned when the alarm sounded, since they refused to evacuate the building, Bastian said. "I just hope we never have a real fire, because a lot of people will get burned up," Bastian said.

Method to stop smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tests in which smokers inhale nicotine from an aerosol bomb suggest that some smokers can be weaned off cigarettes, the National Cancer Institute says.

Although testing is in the early stages, researchers are hopeful that nicotine aerosol sprays will prove to be a safer substitute for cigarettes, which contain harmful carbon monoxide, tars and other noxious gases as well as nicotine.

Initial results indicate that with this technique, the craving for nicotine may eventually wane, too.

"Our results are very promising, but very preliminary," said Dr. Giobatta Gori, deputy director of cancer research.

"We have very few before the average smoker ever — a nicotine ter of his friendly in a telephone inter

"We don't want person's addiction to nicotine," he added. "more safety evaluat cigarettes are worse out if we can wean cigarettes and, then from nicotine."

Christensen said she has no desire to remarry. "When I write to her, I kind of suggest that if the right person is nearby, she should form friendships. But she is living for the day when she will meet Ben again," he said.

At first she had difficulty coping with the loss, Christensen said. "But in her last letter to us, she gave an expression of more understanding and acceptance."

Colleen Jensen

Colleen Jensen lives with a daughter in Clearfield, where she teaches art. Bishop Alfred C. Van Wagenen of Clearfield 3rd Ward said, "It's been pretty tough. But she seems to be coming along. She receives a lot of good help from her family."

Her parents live in Clearfield and her father-in-law is a stake president in Montpelier, Idaho.

Disagreement on motives

Motives behind the killings remain puzzling. Damico said it was due to a soured romance with girlfriend Nicole Berrett. Stanger and Moody disagree.

"That may have been the thing that triggered it," Moody said, "but he was just embittered."

Stanger said it was a combination of reasons, including the fact that he was released from the Oregon penitentiary without any chance to adjust.

The execution did not trigger widespread killings of death row inmates as predicted by opponents. Nor has it been a clear-cut deterrent to crime, as proponents suggested.

One consequence could be an income of as much as $500,000 from a book and subsequent two-act play and movie. Los Angeles promoter Lawrence Schiller, who commissioned author Norman Mailer to write the book.

Mailer has been in Provo four or five times, Damico said, under a veil of secrecy. The Daily Universe tried to contact Mailer recently at Royal Inn, but the call was not returned. Later, the hotel denied Mailer had been registered.

Norman Mailer ... to write book

Lawsuits pending

Gilmore at one time offered to give money to the victims' families, and they now have two lawsuits pending. But Stanger said there is no money in the estate. Schiller reportedly paid $112,000 for Gilmore's story, but Stanger said nothing has been received.

Stanger does not know how Mailer will deal with the Gilmore chronicle. "Last time I talked to him, he didn't either," he said. "There are 20 things he could write about."

The story is indeed complicated. During months of courtroom battles, Gilmore went on a 25-day hunger strike and made two attempts at suicide.

In one of the attempts, he was joined by Mrs. Berrett with whom he had made a suicide pact. She was then committed to the Utah State Hospital to recover from the overdose of drugs.

Mrs. Berrett is now living with her two children while nursing a terminally ill couple, her mother has said.

Last minute delay

Drama continued to the last minute as U.S. District Judge Willis Ritter heard arguments from ACLU attorneys and issued a stay less than 12 hours before the scheduled execution. A U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver overruled the stay after hearing arguments from Utah Attorney General Robert Hansen.

The execution

Word was sent to the Utah State Prison, where the countdown had continued despite the stay. The execution, 18 minutes late, was carried out in a cold, concrete building inside the prison compound.

Ironically, Gilmore was in a light mood the night before, Stanger recalled. "He was watching TV and joking around. He was very happy until the judge issued the stay of execution."

"He was trying to show people how brave he was. Bravery is important to prisoners, and they try to teach each other that."

Officers still seek suspect in Florida college murders

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Frightened sorority sisters returned to class at Florida State University Monday as police hunted for a rapist who murdered two coeds and beat three others as they slept.

"We have no suspect. We don't even have enough for a composite drawing," said frustrated Sheriff Ken Katsaris.

Katsaris offered a $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer, who was described as probably a white male in his early 20s.

"We want people to call about anything, no matter how insignificant the detail."

Katsaris said the killer passed rooms where other girls were sleeping before entering the rooms where the attacks took place. He apparently entered through an unlocked side door.

"We don't know what made him choose the rooms he did. He may have been searching for girls sleeping alone," he said. The two slain girls had roommates who were away for the weekend.

Police said all 32 women who were in the Chi Omega sorority house at the time were asleep when the four residents were attacked, but the assailant was spotted by one woman as she returned shortly after 3 a.m. from a date.

"She saw a man running down the stairs and out the front door. He was carrying a club or a limb or a piece of wood of some sort," said Tallahassee police spokesman Carl Swanson.

Swanson said the woman reported that she heard moaning in the upstairs rooms and found the injured women before calling the police.

The slain women were identified as Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 21, both of St. Petersburg, Fla.

The other two victims shared a room. They were identified as Karen Chandler, 21, of Tallahassee, and Kathy Kleiner, 21, of Miami. One of the victims had been raped.

Also attacked, about two hours later, was Cheryl Ann Thomas, 21, of Richmond, Va., who lived in a duplex three blocks away from the sorority house.

Miss Chandler and Miss Thomas were listed in critical condition after undergoing surgery. Miss Kleiner was in fair condition.

Payoffs discovered in clothing firm audit

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Officials of a clothing firm that operated a business on the Navajo Reservation for 25 years, said they were forced to pay gratuities to tribal officials "who were influential in the continuance of the contract," the Arizona Republic quoted an audit report in its editions last week.

The report, conducted as part of a lawsuit in litigation in Utah, said Henry Hillson, founder of the Hillson Clothing Co. in Albuquerque, told auditors that company officials openly gave gratuities and payoffs to every tribal chairman for the past 25 years, including the present chairman, Peter MacDonald, and other officials.

Hillson, according to the report, said the payments were expected and represented an example of how business is conducted on the reservation. He said the payment practice is not illegal.

Hillson's company provided clothing for the tribe's school clothing program. The tribe spends more than $1 million annually to purchase clothing for Navajo schoolchildren.

Hillson sold his business to the United Navajo Development Council in October 1976. The sale is the subject of the audit ordered by the U.S. District Court in Utah.

The audit, which outlined several examples of mismanagement within the council, also probed the financial dealings of Hillson officials, both before and after the company was acquired by the council.

A Great Opportunity For The Non-Traditional Student

The number of men and women starting or returning to the University after years away from schooling is increasing sharply. To provide support and to meet the unique needs of these non-traditional students, a special Reference Group section has been reserved for Winter '78 semester (General Studies 190, Section NT, 0 Credit).

This class, which will meet once a week, will explore the unique role of the non-traditional student and provide support for students seeking to broaden their lives through education. This special section is intended for all men and women who have come to BYU after any significant break in their education, and is open to all ages and to all levels, from freshmen through graduate students.

Through participation in this group, students who have just come or returned may gain increased confidence in themselves in their new student role. Continuing students are encouraged to participate, to share strengths and make acquaintances.

Registration is in 3126 HBLB, Learning Services Center, across from the circulation desk. It is important that students indicate "NT" where the form asks the section number. The class will be scheduled to fit the times convenient to those who register. Early registration is encouraged. For more information contact: Norma Rohde, 374-1211 ext. 4062.

New fences protect

One trend he cited was the effectiveness of lighting as a crime deterrent. He said the well-lighted stairway behind the Health Center is a location where no crimes have been reported for more than three years.

"No one who commits crimes wants to be seen," Kelshaw said.

In addition to the fences, lighting will be installed throughout the campus. Nineteen new street lights are planned by BYU Security/Police. The wattage of some dim lights will either be increased or two lights will be added on one pole.

As a coup de grace against attackers, BYU Security/Police has included emergency telephones as a part of their security plan. Twenty-two such telephones are proposed. Nine will be installed this school year, Kelshaw said.

He said the telephone caller will not have to identify his location as a unique feature of the plan. The telephones will automatically be connected to BYU Security/Police headquarters where a light will indicate the location of the caller.

"Dialing, dimes or explanations will not be necessary," Kelshaw said. "An officer can respond on the scene to any emergency telephone call in two minutes or less when the new system is operating." He said every available officer will be dispatched to an emergency phone alarm.

"Our goal is to totally eliminate attacks on campus," Kelshaw said. "We could do that if students wouldn't take chances. These precautions do not replace the common sense factor."

Kelshaw said certain walkways will be designated as "security paths." Students will be encouraged to use those paths at night. Even with the new security devices, Kelshaw said students, especially women, should walk in pairs or groups at night.

Student response tended to favor the new security devices. Interviewed at night along one of the newly fenced paths, one coed said, "I probably shouldn't do this, but it's the only way home."

Another coed walking alone said, "It doesn't really bother me." After hesitating a moment she said, "If it were 2 a.m., I would be concerned."

Debra Hurst, a senior from Littleton, Colo. said although a guy could still grab a girl, he wouldn't be able to drag her off the sidewalk into the bushes because of the fences.

Asked if he thought the new security system would help, Glenn Smith, a senior from Alberta, Canada said, "I think it'll help. I hope it'll help."

Construction plans nearly ready for storehouse-cannery complex

Plans are nearing completion for the Orem-Provo region bishop's storehouse and cannery.

It was earlier announced by Jay D. Rigby, coordinator for the Mt. Timpanogos Bishop's storehouse in Orem, that the plans would be completed by January. Complications have arisen and now it is believed the plans for the complex will be finished by the first of February.

Rigby said he hopes the construction will begin by the middle of March, but it is not yet known what matters will have to be taken care of before the contractors can submit the bids. If everything goes as planned, the building should be completed late this fall.

The building site is on church-owned property at 800 W. Center in Lindon. It will replace the storehouses and canneries now being used by these regions.

No definite plans have been made for the old buildings that the new complex will replace, Rigby said.

Sundance is better than open...

it's Super!

Feather-light powder just keeps falling on a deep, packed base.

For the gentle sort of skier: We keep slopes upon slopes packed and neatly groomed. By the time you get here in the morning, we've been out for hours packing the slopes into a just right condition.

For died-in-the-wool hot dogs: Come ski our two newest runs up high on Flathood. We call them Dropout and Redfinger. And they'll take the breath out of anyone crazy (or good) enough to ski them!

For you powder hounds: It's been one of our best years ever — we've had fresh powder most mornings since Christmas. As always, weekday mornings are the best times to get it. Be here by 8:30 and chances are you'll find it deep, fluffy, undisturbed.

Hours & Prices: We're open daily 8:30 to 4:30. Full-day passes are still $7.00. Morning half-days (8:30-1:00) are $4.00, afternoon half-days (1:00-4:30) are $5.00.

Night skiing: For sure! Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday night 4:30 to 10:00 p.m. Night passes are $4.50.

For a great date affair: We'll see you and your date in the Tree Room for a warm, fireside dinner. The steaks are luscious, the fire blazing, and there's a picture-window view of our winter mountains. (It's a bit romantic.) Reservations suggested.

Come to Sundance soon. Bring your skis, your friends, your appetite. Or all three. We'll take care of you!

For skiing information and Tree Room reservations, call 225-4100 or 800/662-5901 (toll-free in Utah).

Council against pornography elects '88 chairman, officers

The group behind the push against pornography in Utah County elected its officers for 1978 Friday night.

Officers for the Utah County Council for Better Movies and Literature were nominated and elected by citizens in attendance at the public meeting. Arturo De Hoyos was elected chairman, with James Tracy as his assistant. A second assistant will be chosen at a future date, De Hoyos said.

Two council members were re-elected to their positions. Vivian Long will retain her job as secretary-treasurer, and Hal Williams, a member of the BYU Public Communications staff, will continue as publicity chairman.

In a speech before the election of officers, Fred Podlesny, former council chairman, reviewed the accomplishments of the group.

Recalling the public interest shown at the November meeting to organize the fight against pornography, Podlesny said all R-rated films are reviewed before being shown in Provo.

Apathy has been a problem at times, though, he added. "Most people think everybody is against pornography, so nobody needs to fight it."

Podlesny cited as an accomplishment by the council lobbying for legal changes to make the Provo anti-obscenity law similar to Orem's.

Although the city initiated the fight against "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," the action was supported by the anti-obscenity council, he said.

Newly elected chairman DeHoyos urged Utah Valley residents to attend the council meetings. "Alone, it is difficult to do much. If we get more people involved we will eventually be able to get together a group of people who will defend their homes."

DeHoyos said he plans to create finance and publicity committees in the effort to gather more local support.

"We have a lot of people who will collect will do to fight pornography," he said.

De Hoyos said, "I see an erosion of the values we want in this valley and a need to rekindle these desires in people once more," DeHoyos said.

Utah Symphony, one of the nation's foremost symphonies and a major symphony recording firm at BYU Friday.

Utah Symphony concert planned

An all-Tchaikovsky concert will be presented by the Utah Symphony at BYU Thursday as a feature of the Music Department's Distinguished Artist series.

Directed by Maurice Abravanel, the concert will open at 8 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC, with the performance of "Marche Slave," followed by "Romeo and Juliet."

Following intermission, the orchestra will play the Symphony No. 4 in F minor. All of these selections have been recorded previously by the Utah Symphony.

Because of its extensive recordings, as well as its repeated national and international tours, the symphony has gained a reputation as one of the outstanding orchestras of the present time.

The orchestra makes regular tours through the Intermountain West, playing approximately 185 concerts annually.

Now in his 31st year with the Utah Symphony, Maestro Abravanel has been recognized by critics and the public as a great music personality, capable of communicating fine music, whether familiar or unfamiliar, to a wide variety of audiences.

He is particularly well-known for his great interest in youth and for involving youth in performances with the orchestra.

The symphony has made several international and national tours in the 31 years since Maestro Abravanel took its helm. It also made a tour of the nation during the Bicentennial festivities, performing at major concert centers throughout the U.S.

Song, dance tryouts Wed.

Auditions will be held on campus Wednesday for positions in Marriott's Great America dance and music revues. The audition is one of only a few such auditions scheduled in the U.S.

The auditions, for singers, dancers and musicians, will be held from 1 to 6 p.m. in the Parade Drama Theater, HFAC.

An earlier release from Marriott said that musicians would not be auditioned at the Wednesday audition. That has since been changed, according to a Marriott representative.

Questions concerning the auditions should be directed to Dr. Charles Matten, of the Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts, according to Marriott personnel.

Reagan, Buckley debate tonight

Debate on the Panama Canal treaty between right-wing spokesmen William F. Buckley and Ronald Reagan will air tonight at 8 p.m. on KBYU-TV, Channel 11, not Wednesday night, as was reported in Friday's Universe.

The debate, bringing together two conservative but opposite views of the treaty, is termed by some as a turning point in the canal battle.

Reagan, long a staunch opponent of the treaty, will be a guest on long-time friend Buckley's Firing Line for the debate, which will be moderated by retired Sen. Sam Ervin.

"Turning Point" starts Friday at the Carillon Square Theaters.

Vietnam vets special has excellent reporting

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)

Last month, CBS aired a series of Vietnam vets called "The Class That Went to War." Tonight, CBS does likewise with "Charlie Company at Home: The Vietnam Veteran."

The CBS effort, reported by Bruce Morton, deserves a look. It's a fine program, with no maze of statistics, no crush of government mutterings to reduce human experience to vague abstractions.

What it does, for most of the hour, is just hear out eight ex-members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, Vietnam class of '70, on how the war affected them and how they're getting along now.

Their rifle company made headlines when, while CBS' John Laurence was with it, one squad refused the order of a new company commander to move up a certain trail. The old hands felt it invited instant ambush.

When televised nationally, the refusal — coming at a time the United States was gradually pulling out of the war — caused a major flap in military circles and provided fresh fuel for those protesting the war.

"Charlie Company" only briefly relives that moment, concentrating instead on well-edited looks at the GIs then and now to illustrate how fate, the government and time have treated them.

Making an obvious point, Morton notes that when they came home, no bands played, no cheers resounded. The freedom bird disoriented them, they found their separate ways looking for work, for a normal life.

But he makes an important observation, echoed by Richard "Doc" Howe, the company medic, on one thing they found "back in the world."

And that is that some feared them, "seeing them as they were sometimes shown on television and films — as unstable, dangerous men trained to kill."

The opposite emerges in Morton's excellent interviews with Howe, ex-mortarman Glenn Hindley, ex-squad leader Lyman Gene Dunning, ex-machine gunner Bob Jackson, Capt. Robert Jackson, and all the rest.

And remarkably little bitterness is expressed, even from ex-rifleman George Rivera, who after getting shot up in Vietnam came home, couldn't get hired and is still unemployed, drawing disability pay.

He speaks of being so depressed at times "I've thought about just blowing my head off," but he still has his self-respect, speaks with pride of being an American.

The general impression the men give is that whatever raw deal any got when they came home from an unpopular war, they've adjusted to it, can live with it and don't pity themselves in the least.

Anger, combines ballet, soap opera

Anger erupts in a confrontation between two old friends, Deedee (Shirley McLaine) and Emma (Anne Bancroft), in "Turning Point," coming to the Provo area.

a story; a silly, schmaltzy, soap opera of a story about two women who are unhappy with their lives. One woman, Emma (Anne Bancroft) has sacrificed husband and children for her career. The other woman, Deedee (Shirley McLaine) has sacrificed career for husband and children. Realizing that old age will prevent them from reversing their decisions, the two women clash as they both try to find fulfillment through the young and innocent Emilia, who achieves success in behalf of her mother while becoming an object of affection for Emma.

In a sentimental subplot, Emilia, too, must choose between love and dancing; establishing a relationship with Russian dancer Yuri (Mikhail Baryshnikov), or forging ahead with her own career. At the end of the film, she decides to dance, not kiss, apparently opting for the latter alternative.

Emilia seems happy with her life as a dancer, but also, says Emma, little does she know how short that life will be. The film ends on a bitter-sweet note, with Emma and Deedee united as they commiserate over Emilia's fragile happiness.

Emma and Deedee, with their inner conflicts and anxieties, are basically believable characters, but they lack motivation. Why do they dwell on the past? Why do they regret their choices? Script writer Arthur Laurents seems to think that having a career automatically eliminates the possibility of marriage and family from a woman's life. But the fact is that many women, including ballerinas, have both careers and families.

It is unrealistic to blame one's lack of children on career or vice versa, or to insist that a woman must make an irreversible choice between the two. And old age is not the end of everything. Alexandra Danilova in the role of dance teacher and coach Dahkarova provides a perfect example of a retired ballerina living a full life. However, her role as a foil for Emma and Deedee is never fully developed.

Those who enjoy good dancing will want to see "Turning Point" simply to watch Baryshnikov in action. The famous Russian lives up to his reputation as the greatest male dancer in the world, and is also a very good actor. He adds a lot of charm to his otherwise poor part.

But in spite of good performances by Bancroft and McLaine, spectacular dancing, and a fascinating view of the world of ballet, the poor script makes "Turning Point" barely mediocre. It's really very little more than a cultural soap opera; sophisticated but shallow and too trite to be true.

"Turning Point" starts Friday at the Carillon Square Theaters.

Y to host Russians in cage tilt tonight

By DICK HARMON
Assistant Sports Editor

BYU takes a break from its Western Athletic Conference schedule tonight to play the traveling Russian National basketball team at 7:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center.

The Russians, who arrived in Provo yesterday, defeated UCLA 80-79 in a nationally-televised game Sunday.

The UCLA game was the first in the second leg of the Russians' tour. They ended their first tour a month ago, returning to the USSR with a 5-8 record.

The Soviet team tallied victories over Oregon State, Utah, Indiana, Arkansas and Alabama during its November tour.

Players back

The Russians, who beat the University of Utah 83-75, should have the services of three star players who missed the previous tour. Returning to action are Alexander Belov, star of the last second shot at the Munich Olympic victory against the U.S. in 1972; and Alexandr Salnikov, one of the leading scorers for the national team.

BYU, now with an 0-2 record in the WAC and 6-12 overall, and the Russians will play according to regular NCAA rules tonight instead of the slightly varied form of international rules.

Alan Taylor at 6-10 will go against Vladimir Tkachenko at 7-4, or Vladimir Belostniy at 7-0. Cougar scoring leader Danny Ainge at 6-4 is the same height as Salnikov. The smallest player for the Russians is Stanislav Eremkin at 6-1.

Young team

The older Russians will be playing the youngest team they have faced on their tours. BYU's Kevin Nielsen is 17 years old, while Salnikov is 28 years old.

Both teams have basketball tilts scheduled for Thursday. BYU hosts the University of Arizona, while the Russians travel to Kansas State.

The game against the Russian Nationals will conclude what BYU Coach Frank Arnold said would be games against the best amateur teams in the world — UCLA, North Carolina, and the USSR Nationals.

Cougars Scott Runia (20) and Danny Ainge (22) go up to block a shot by USU's Oscar Williams in BYU's victory over the Aggies.

Cougar volleyball squad goes on road to Canada

By JOY ROSS
Universe Sports Editor

A nine-member team from BYU will leave Wednesday for a four-day road trip to Canada where the Cougars will play the No. 4 open team and the No. 1 collegiate team in Canada.

The open team, the Calgary Volleyball Club, has older, more experienced players and some Canadian Olympic players, said Coach Carl McGown. The other team, the top college team in Canada, is from the University of Winnipeg.

McGown said the Cougars have played very well in practice lately and "should do very well" if they play their best game.

In a tournament last weekend, a BYU Alumni team beat the regular BYU volleyball team 15-12, 15-13 to capture the championship in the Utah Open in Salt Lake City.

Coach Carl McGown

earlier had said he would "be surprised" if BYU teams were not playing each other for the championship in the tourney. "It was kind of hoping it would be the other way around," he said on Sunday of the Alumni win. "But when the chips were down, the old guys were smarter than the young guys."

A second regular BYU team was knocked out of the title contention earlier in the day when it was forced to forfeit a game because a player didn't show.

The remaining BYU team beat the Alumni in early action 15-8, 15-6, but the Alumni rallied in the championship game.

BYU's teams also defeated teams from the University of Utah, Idaho Falls, and the Salt Lake City YMCA.

Game tickets to be distributed

Tickets for the basketball games against Arizona and Arizona State will be handed out on block seating, random seating sign-up and first come, first served basis, according to Errol Jackson, of the ASBYU Athletics office.

Jackson said tickets for the game against the Russian National Team tonight night will be handed out in the same manner as previous games — on a first-come, first-served basis beginning at 4 p.m. today at the Marriott Center northeast corner ticket office.

However, tickets for the basketball games against Arizona and Arizona State Thursday and Saturday will be handed out according to block seating lists on the basis of students' social security numbers. Some tickets will also be given out by random seating sign-up and first-come, first-served.

Block seating tickets for the Arizona game will be distributed Thursday while tickets for the Arizona State game will be distributed Friday. Students should watch the Universe daily bulletin or ad columns for specific pickup times.

Students may also sign up today on computer cards for random seating. The sign-up will take place from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the East Ballroom, ELWC. Students need only to sign up once to be considered for tickets to both games.

The remainder of the tickets for the Arizona and Arizona State games will be given away at a first come, first served basis at the Marriott Center northeast corner ticket office.

Arizona game tickets will be handed out beginning at 4 p.m. Thursday and ASU tickets will be distributed at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Three teams win in tourney

The Daily Universe 3-man basketball tournament concluded over the weekend with three teams taking top honors in their respective division playoffs.

The Mac team won in the 6' and under division, while Bualas was the champion in the 6' and over.

The team of The Good, the Bad and the Ugly won in the women's division.

Captains of the winning teams should see Wayne Wade in the Athletics Office between 10 and 12 on Thursday.

said Errol Jackson, ticket committee co-chairman, to find out about their prizes.

Give till it helps.
